

RHEUMATISM IS EASILY RELIEVED BY CLEANSING THE BLOOD

S. S. S. Gives Quick Relief by Toning Up the Blood.

Yes, but how? A natural question. The answer is that you must cleanse your blood by stimulating it to healthy, vigorous action, so that it will throw off the germs and impurities that cause rheumatism. The action of the wonderful blood purifier, S. S. S., is to practically renew the life blood, giving it vigor, stimulate the flow, making it throw off the germs and the poison impurities. The excruciating pains of rheumatism, whether it is the shooting, stabbing, searing, the gripping, aching or muscular rheumatism, or aching arms and legs that break up sleep, will be entirely relieved by S. S. S. Don't use nostrums and drugs. Take the blood-bath—Nature's blood tonic, S. S. S. Get it at any drugstore, but insist upon S. S. S. Let us tell you about blood diseases. Send for booklet, "What the Mirror Tells," or if you are in a peculiar case, write Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga., but begin treatment at once.

Old Superstitions.

In certain parts of the Slav countries a bride bows to the fire on the hearth when she first enters her new home. In parts of Bohemia families will not permit a brand to be taken from the hearth by an outsider or for the use of another family. In Albania, nothing unclean is thrown into the fire. Also after the birth of a child, forty days must elapse before a brand may be taken from the fire for the use of another household.

Born Tired.

"He wuz bo'n too tired ter git outen his own way," said the old colored brother. "De only exercise he ever gits is fallin' from grace, an' after he falls, please God, he's too tired ter git up!"—Atlanta Constitution.

SAYS DOCTOR POISONED RELATIVES

DISTRICT ATTORNEY AT NEW YORK ORDERS ARREST OF DR. WARREN WHITE IN GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN.

New York, March 23.—District Attorney Swann today ordered the arrest of Dr. Arthur Warren White, son-in-law of John E. Peck, millionaire drug dealer, at Grand Rapids, Mich., whose death and that of his wife have been under investigation. An autopsy showed deposits of poison in the stomach and intestines. When detectives went to arrest Dr. White today, they found him in a stupor from a self-administered opiate. Physicians are working on him, trying to save his life.

Ballad Early Form of Newspaper. The ballad, or that form of it which is associated with the broadside, was one predecessor of the newspaper as a commentator on events. It was written for the people and sold to the people. Printed on poor paper and passed from hand to hand, copies of early ballads were seldom preserved. Fortunately several men of the seventeenth century began to make collections of ballads, and the copies of broadsides printed before 1700 that are now in existence are supposed to number about 10,000. Soon after 1700 the printed form of the ballad was changed, the "black letter" disappearing, but the ballad continued as a chronicler of happenings and a commentator on political, military and other public events until the middle of the nineteenth century, and in the United States as well as England the "topical" song of today perpetuates the satirical function of the ballad.

BANKING TALK-DISCOUNTING THE PAPER

A VERY LEGITIMATE METHOD OF EXCHANGE AND A SIMPLE ILLUSTRATION TELLS THE STORY OF BUYING THE PAPER.

It so happens in business that all payments cannot be made in cash, for most of the business is done on credit in one form or another. Small purchases and many of the daily expenditures are cash transactions; but business as a whole moves on credit, the form depending upon the customs characteristic of that peculiar business. The most common form of credit is the book account, where goods are sold and "charged" to the purchaser. When you go into the grocery and tell him to "charge it" you are opening a credit with him in the form of a book account. This is common to all retailing transactions. But in the larger dealings, the credit is in the form of a promissory note, which is merely a written promise to pay a sum certain, in money, to a designated person, firm or corporation, at a stipulated time. Hundreds of thousands of these notes are made every day. They are given, merchant to merchant, in payment of debts resulting from the sale of goods, and while they settle the debt must themselves be paid in money, in order that the obligation may be finally discharged for a promise never liquidates a debt.

If these promises could be treated as money and passed from hand to hand, they might answer very well, but they are of non-uniform denomination, their goodness is a matter not commonly known, and even though the maker might be as "good as the government," few know it, and few would take the risk.

And if the holder could wait until maturity, he would get cash from the promiser. But he does not want to wait that long—he wants to turn his evidence of debt into money at once; for with money—real money—he can get better terms, and for certain purposes, such as paying laborers, he must use cash. There must, therefore, be some medium through which he can turn this promise into money before it is due—for a price—and that medium is the bank. The process of doing this is called discounting, which in other words means buying the paper. A simple illustration will explain:

Suppose A sells B a bill of goods on three months' credit. A does not want to wait while B sells the goods and gets the money to pay him, and therefore offers to take B's note for the amount. But the note is not money, and if A would use the money, he must find someone who will give him money for it. He might find someone who, for the hope of gain, would advance the money; but the logical place to get this done is the bank, for the bank always has money. It knows men and their ability to keep their promises, and can judge the quality of the risk. A therefore offers the note to his banker, who says in substance: "I think B is good for this amount. If you will endorse—promise to pay if he does not—I will buy that paper evidence of debt from you." Let us say B is for $100, due in three months. The banker knows that at the end of three months he will get the $100, and so gives A $89.50 for it, the $1.50 being interest on the money for that time at 6 per cent. Ordinarily the banker would not give A the cash, but credit his account, with the privilege of checking against it, which is virtually the same thing.

Now, what is the result? A sold his goods and got his money at once. He had three months to sell the goods to get the money to pay the note when the banker presented it at maturity. A could use the $89.50 to buy more goods to sell to C, and the bank has made a profit of $1.50 for taking the risk. That is what banks are for, to take risks, to know men, to help business and make profits for itself. And this it does to a very marked degree. We could not do business very well without this help, and it is one of the indispensable adjuncts of business. The promises of business men held in the national banks of the country alone amount to over three billion dollars.

HEROIC ACTS FROM FRANCO-BELGIAN FRONT, IN PRINT

Paris, March 23.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—The first published collection of heroic words and actions of the war on the Franco-Belgian front has appeared in a volume of 360 pages edited by Paul Souchoin. There are remarks of soldiers leaving for the front, in battle and in the trenches, anecdotes of generals and other officers, the talk of the wounded, and the words of dying heroes.

Cottolene

"The Natural Shortening"

Foods cooked with Cottolene come to the table with their natural goodness improved with a better flavor. Biscuits shortened with it delight by their taste, their lightness, their whiteness and their wholesomeness. Pie crust shortened with Cottolene has that flaky goodness which perfects the whole pie. All foods fried in it are better-tasting and digestible because Cottolene does not soak into them. There is no substitute for Cottolene—nothing "just as good." Try Cottolene—try it in your biscuits, for example, then in your other cooking. Arrange with your grocer for a regular supply. It is packed in pails of various sizes.

Well toward the beginning is the reply of a soldier marching through Paris to a news vendor who offered him the latest extra, saying: "Here, my brave boy, is the latest news."

"News?" replied the soldier. "It is we who are going to make the news."

Four young artillerymen of the contingent of 1913 passed along the Avenue Trudaine in Paris on the way to the station. A pretty woman on the arm of her husband stopped on the sidewalk and cried: "Poor boys! Good luck to you!" while a tear rolled down her cheek. One of the artillerymen saluted, then took off his cap, twirled it in the air and cried: "Come now, my dear lady, just a little smile, please."

Two sergeant-majors chosen from a number of volunteers left the French trenches near the Vesle for an abandoned farm where, climbing to the garret, they were able to discover the situation of German batteries that were causing considerable losses to the French troops. The French three-inchers soon forced the Germans to change their position to the very spot where these two sergeant-majors were in observation. "The French gunners ceased firing until this message came over the telephone: 'The guns are in position. Go ahead—you may fire, fire, aim at us, commandant, go on, fire.'"

The commandant hesitated to give the order, but the German battery must be silenced, and finally the three-inchers struck up again, destroying the battery and annihilating the farm house, with the two sergeant-majors.

Souchoin tells a similar story of a lieutenant posted in a tower a few hundred meters from the German trenches, from where he telephoned

"Why Swear, Dear? Use 'Gets-It' for Corns!"

It's the New Plan. Simple. Sure as Fate. Applied in a Few Seconds. "Why, John, I never knew you to use such language! I've told you several times it's no use to try those bandages, salves, tapes, plasters, and contrito the French artillery the positions of the enemy. During a half hour he continued sending indications, and then finished with the words: "I hear the steps of Germans who are coming up the stairs. Believe nothing more that is said to you over the wire. I have my revolver, and shall never be taken alive." Nothing has even been heard since from this officer.

"CASCARETS" FOR A COLD, BAD BREATH OR SICK HEADACHE

Best for liver and bowels, for biliousness, sour stomach and constipation.

Get a 10-cent box now. Furred Tongue, Bad Colds, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret tonight will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.
